Do you have a talent, skill, passion, or idea that you'd love to use (and get paid for using!!)?

Would you like to work in one of these exciting careers from your home unit?

Pilot: Help us pilot new programs

Critic: Review projects currently under development

Artist: Create artwork in a variety of mediums

Writer: Pen curricula, web pages, stories and more

Monitor: Evaluate existing programs

Philanthropist: Share your existing materials for potential nationwide use

Developer: Research content and outline new ideas

Pioneer: Conceptualize new ideas and program areas

Express Yourself!

Let us know your interests by returning the FAX-Back form on page 12.

Read these true-life success stories for a sample of what YOU TOO have the potential to accomplish:

Roberta Burzynski was quietly writing and editing science publications at work while creating children's books as a personal hobby at home. She turned her pastime into work-time by authoring the new "Open Your Eyes: Woodsy Owl's ABC's." See more about this exciting new book on our center pages...and look for Roberta's upcoming book-signing tour!

Charon Geigle has a passionate desire to spotlight our National Grasslands. She shared her ideas with us at a CE National Conference — and now we're producing our series of Grasslands Posters and Activities! Thanks to Charon we just might stop hearing "National What's" when we mention our grasslands! Check out the update on this project on our center pages.

Courtney Couch is a dedicated Fire Prevention Technician with a talent for creating exquisite watercolor images of flora and fauna. Her special talents were tapped and her work now adorns the Grasslands poster series! Take a look at these beauties on our center pages!

Jimmye Turner, also a dedicated Fire Prevention Technician, now doodles for profit! His lively cartoons are climbing and jumping on our Junior Snow Ranger website (under construction at www.symbols.gov/jrsnowranger)!

...And Teri Heyer, while doing her great job as NE Area CE Coordinator, produced a CE bookmark to use locally. We liked it so much it went nationwide!
